VOGUE.COM

Spring Art Guide: The 10 Must-See Shows of the Season

MARCH 20, 2015 2:16 PM by MARK GUIDUCCI

Today is the first day of spring, which means that very soon it will again be pleasant to stroll around the Chelsea galleries. In the spirit of thinking ahead, here are the New York shows upcoming and already under way—plus one in Los Angeles—that are not to be missed this season. Frieze and the Venice Biennale await in the distance.

Go to L.A.

Gerhard Richter, Untitled (26.Febr.92),1992

Photo: Courtesy of Hannah Hoffman Gallery, Los Angeles

While it's spring in New York City, it's summer in Los Angeles. But that's a less important reason to plan a trip to the West Coast, where young galleries indigenous to L.A. have graduated to showing established artists alongside their programs of emerging ones. In particular, make sure to see the Gerhard Richterat Hannah Hoffman Gallery.

"Gerhard Richter: Overpainted Photographs" will be on view at Hannah Hoffman Gallery (1010 North Highland Avenue) from March 21 until April 18.